

Have fun. We will laugh, a lot – with you, at you, and at ourselves. We take our jobs and our clients seriously, yet we know humor brings a sense of calm and perspective, which is when we do our best work. This is supposed to be fun, after all.

Personal growth. We will grow because our people will grow. The success of our clients is intertwined with our own development, and we always keep this at the forefront of what we do. Fostering growth makes us better as professionals, and that makes our work more valuable.

Be more than more of the same. Diverse backgrounds, opinions, and expertise create a better, more enriching firm. We're not looking for more of the same – we're looking for unique people who share our values and make us better.

Be real. Trust, dependability, and integrity all feed off one another and are necessary qualities at Revive.

Take the extra step. Creativity and distinction may take more time or more effort, but providing "color" makes us different – we're the "anti-plain." Whether it's the artwork in our office, the paper we write on, or the creativity we offer clients, we seek to add a little flavor and we are grateful for others who do, too.

Be better. We push ourselves – to achieve our own goals, to be better every day, to help each other, and to give clients the best.

Respect and transparency. Respect is an overused term, but underused in practice. At Revive, respect means no one is more important than anyone else. Communication is clear and feedback is honest, but tactful. We accept errors (but not carelessness) and forgive mistakes, without culture and physical environment – any and all questions are welcome from anyone to anyone at any time.

Be authentic. We have lives – before work, during work, and after work. Yet it all makes its way into the office because we genuinely know each other and believe balance is important. Working at Revive is sharing your life with people that you care about, and being the same person at work that you are at home.
